

Ray Villalobos has been an instructor at Seminole State College for over 10 years. Teaching courses like Fundamentals of Interactive Design, Mobile Web Applications development, Web Effects I, II and III, Flash Gaming and others. He's the author of Exploring Multimedia for designers and works as a lynda.com as a Staff Author with 16 published courses, including his JavaScript series covering JSON, AJAX and the DOM, plus validating and processing forms with JavaScript and PHP, Building Facebook Applications with JavaScript and PHP and jQuery Mobile Web Applications. He's prepared a course curriculum for Seminole State College's New and Emerging Industries through Workforce Central Florida to help displaced workers rejoin the workforce with new media skills.

Ray has been a Web Designer and Developer working as a Senior Interactive Producer for Tribune Interactive, where he developed games and immersive multimedia projects for the number one website in Central Florida (<http://www.orlandosentinel.com>). As a Director of Multimedia for Entravision Communications, he built a network for radio and TV station websites with it's own social network, streaming, contests and other interactive web technologies.